

BUILD Magazine Announces the Winners of the 2021 Home and Garden Awards

Awards Coordinator Holly Morris took a moment to praise the winners of this edition of the program: “While it has been a challenging twelve months – to put it lightly – success has still defined the construction and design industries. With that in mind, I offer my sincere congratulations to all of our esteemed winners who were acknowledged in our 2021 program. I hope you have a wonderful rest of the year ahead.”

2021 Home and Garden Awards

The home is a deeply personal space. It's a safe place. A reflection of the person that lives within it. Those that work in this industry understand this and have to be, ultimately, client centric in their approach. They have to balance form and function. Art with practicality, all while keeping the client central to every process.

It's incredibly difficult, at the best of times. The last year has been one of great upheaval, and the home has acted as a fortress to the uncertainty of the outside world. Homes have been the stable line in the sand, a place to retreat to when we need to. Its importance has only been magnified, a thousand-fold.

By natural extension, the experts that operate in this industry have continued on, endeavoring to create simply extraordinary locations that anybody would find joy in. At the end of the day, BUILD's Home & Garden Awards were launched to acknowledge the everyday experts and specialists that work tirelessly to create spaces that we, simply, love to spend time in.
